

St. Louis Science Center

By Angela Ash

Forest Park is absolutely a highlight of St. Louis. With biking and running trails, playgrounds, picnic areas, and all of the other average things that one might expect in such a large place, Forest Park decides to throw in a few world class museums and a zoo. Most of these attractions are even FREE! (I think they may be over-achievers.)

And located within this gorgeous park is the St. Louis Science Center. The hands-on exhibits at this museum actually makes learning FUN... and they are never ending. You can build your very own Gateway Arch, experiment with gravity, and test a dozen or more scientific theories... all without paying even a penny![]

But to really experience the Science Center, you must catch a show at the planetarium, where you can choose from a variety of experiences in the solar system for a very small fee![] And after the lights go up, browse through exhibits that will allow you to see just how life is up in space.[]

The Science Center also offers movies in their giant OMNIMAX Theater.[]

For more information, visit the Science Center online or call (314) 289-4400.